Lewis Alex. Hart Died in Seventy-Second Year

Lewis Alexander Hart, M.A., B.C.L., notary, writer and prominent member and benefactor of the Jewish community in Montreal, died after a lengthy illness, in his seventy-seventh year. He came of a leading Jewish family of Canada, was a brilliant graduate and afterwards a member of the Faculty of McGill University, and was a keen student of the institutions of his race and his religion.

Mr. Hart was born in 1847, the son of the late Captain Alexander Thomas Hart, seigneur of the fief of Courval, on the boundary of Yamaska and Nicolet counties, and the grandson of Aaron Hart, who came to Canada in 1760, with the British troops under the command of General Haldimand, and later settled in Three Rivers. Mr. Hart was himself born and brought up in Three Rivers, receiving his primary education there at Lawler's School. At the age of twelve he became a pupil of the Montreal Collegiate Institute and entered McGill University at the age of fifteen years, in 1862. In 1865, he graduated, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, after having obtained at his first session at McGill, the English essay prize and first-class standing in Hebrew and English literature. Following graduation he entered the notarial office of Theodore Doucet.

Taking the law course, he graduated in 1869 from McGill, with the B.C.L. and M.A. degrees, besides the first prize and a gold medal for excellence in the study of Roman law. In 1869, he was admitted to the notarial profession, being then but twenty-two years of age. In 1878, his marriage to Fannie Elizabeth Benjamin took place, which proved a union of two ancient families, as Mr. Hart's mother was Miriam Judah.

In 1880, the still young notary was made lecturer upon the theory and practice of notarial deeds and proceedings by the Governors of McGill University. His appointment in this capacity to the McGill Faculty of Law marked the initiation of a new course and the first appointment of a notary to the faculty. As a writer, Mr. Hart was known best by his publication, "A Jewish Reply to Christian Evangelists," which was a pointed rejoinder to Christian missionizing efforts. Mr. Hart also wrote several articles for "The Gazette" on subjects on which he was an authority.

The late Lewis Alexander Hart was a past president of the Baron de Hirsch Institute, a past president of the Hebrew Benevolent Society, a life member and officer of the Spanish-Portuguese Synagogue, and was a member and past officer of the Royal Albert Lodge, A.F. & A.M.

Surviving, besides his widow, are four sons: Allan J. Hart, Claude B., and Philip B., all three of Montreal, and Arthur D. Hart, Toronto, and four daughters: Mrs. Albert Freedman, Mrs. M. A. Michael, and the Misses Dorothy and Gladys Hart.

The funeral, which took place from 150 Grey Avenue, on Tuesday, November 27, was well attended by hundreds of men in all walks of life. The body was laid to rest in the burial plot of the Spanish and Portuguese Cemetery, with Rabbi Joseph Corcos officiating.

Peretz Hirschbein

Peretz Hirschbein, the eminent journalist and playwright, addressed an audience of upwards of 1,000 people in the Windsor Hall, on Sunday, November 25. Mr. Hirschbein, who has just returned from a trip to New Zealand and South Africa, drew intimate word pictures of the Jew as he is in all parts of the world. He is a slim man, of striking though quiet manner, and speaks in charming language of Jewish colonies and Jewish ideals the world over. He drew clever thumb-nail sketches of the individuals and groups that he had met on board ship, crossing the Pacific, and later in Wellington, Sydney, Johannesburg, Natal, and of the Jew in Poland and Russia, and contrasted vividly Johannesburg, which, though a city of but few Jews, has nevertheless a true spirit as a result of the complete Jewish life that is lived there, with certain much larger Jewish centres which leave a Jew untouched, because the elusive feeling of kinship has been lost. His closing thought was a strong plea for an open door to immigration in Canada.

Mr. Hirschbein, who spoke under the auspices of the Jewish People's Library, was introduced by Mr. H. M. Caiserman. A musical recital opened the programme, the first number of which was Mendelssohn's Concerto in A Minor, played by Saul Brant, the violinist. Cousin David.

Dear Fathers and Mothers and Uncles and Aunts and Big Brothers and Big Sisters of all my Cousins:

This letter is for you, and not for any of the cousins. Cousins must stop reading this very minute, be they never so curious. Because this letter is about them, but not for them. As I was saying to all the "grown-ups," this is Chanukah Week... and Chanukah, as you know, is a time of the year beloved by all children, because of the stories and the festivals, the ceremonies and the gifts. And as you know, grown-ups can make it a holiday long to be remembered. Let me tell you how one very charming woman helped her two little boys to understand and love the Chanukah story. First of all, she told them that beautiful old story of the brave Maccabees who marched against Antiochus Epiphanes and his forces, and fought for eight long days and nights, until victory was theirs. At the beginning of the battle there was just enough oil in the lamp in the temple to last one day. As you know the lamp was always kept filled with oil, so that it might burn brightly as a symbol that God (light) was always present. But though there was enough oil for only one day, and although it was impossible for anyone to approach the temple to refill the lamp, by some miracle the light was kept burning during the eight long days and nights of the battle. Which is why we keep the Chanukah candles burning brightly during Chanukah week. One candle on the first night, two on the second, and so on until the last day when the whole eight are lighted. It is a beautiful ceremony, isn't it? But I want to come back to the charming mother of those two little boys that I was telling you about. She was the sort of mother that always has an extra-nice surprise for people... and last Chanukah, she had all sorts of delightful (though not necessarily expensive) gifts for her boys. They kindled the first candle, oh, ever so reverently on the Eve of Chanukah, and fell asleep thinking of the ancient story... only to wake up in the morning to find a tiny toy "drehle" for each of them. If you've ever played with them you can imagine what fun they had. And perhaps you can imagine, too, what laughter there was when on awakening the next morning they found two gifts for each; and on the third day, three gifts, and so on until the eighth day. I think you'll agree with me that those boys remembered that Chanukah festival for a long, long... What do you think, cousins? Oh, I forgot! At first I said that this letter was just for grown-ups, but well... if any cousins have been tempted to read on... why, it's all right!

Cousin Judith.

P.S.—Write me about how you spent Chanukah. I mean the grown-ups as well as the regular girl and boy

MAIL BAG

Dear Cousin Judith:

I was reading your fine section in THE REVIEW last week. I thought it was fine, and that is why I wanted to tell you about the party I went to. It was in the summer, but I still can remember it. I enjoyed myself very much, and did not arrive too early or too late. The hostess first played the piano, and then each girl in turn.

Then when everybody had arrived, we sat down for the refreshments. We had the birthday cake first, and I got a shoe in my piece. We then had soda water, fruit, candies and chocolates.

After the refreshments, we had all kinds of games, such as "Musical Chairs," "Wink," "Blind Man's Buff." The name of the giver of the party was Jenny Gang, and some of the guests' names were Sadie Bregman, Ray Halter, Reta Kling, and so on. Jenny Gang's older sister played the piano, and all the girls danced.

Eva Borsook
(I am nine years old.)

Dear Eva:

I am glad that you are not a procrastinator. Y'see, if you were a procrastinator... you would read our page, and if you liked it, why, you would just think of writing to tell us so... and you would go on thinking of doing it without ever really writing... and we should never become acquainted. Whereas, since you aren't a procrastinator (it really is a long word, isn't it?), you did write and we did become acquainted and everything is all right! Did you play the piano at the party too? I think it's great to find a favour in one's portion of cake. I'm not very lucky that way, because I've never found anything but raisins and sometimes nuts in my piece. But then, perhaps, I'm lucky to find that. Are you going to send us something for the competition? Do! And write again and tell us more about yourself.

Cousin Judith.

Dear V.M.G.:

Never fear... I'll keep your secret carefully. You see, Cousins, V.M.G., the author of "Beano's Exploits," wants us to keep his real name a secret. I'm glad you like our section. As to what you say about it giving all young Jewish Canadians a chance to show what they can do with their pens, well, that's just the whole thing in a nutshell. See what you can do to keep things interesting! What do you think of a "get-together"?... each cousin to introduce one or more new cousins to our section. Think it over, and let's have any suggestions that you can think of.

Cousin-fully yours, David.

"Y" News

On Sunday, November 25, Mr. Brown, the President of the Manhattan Single Tax Association, addressed the members of the "Y" and their friends.

The large auditorium of the "Y" was jammed to capacity on Monday, November 26, when the first boxing tournament of the present season was run off. In the first bout young Sammy Stein won the decision over Abe. Cohen, and in the second, I Bobkin beat H. Davidson very easily in the 90-pound class. B. Tennenbaum carried off the honours against H. Kleinberg in the 105-pound class. O. Sugar just managed to win against J. Miller. In the 70-pound final, Kid Fish won handily against A. Churney. The Joe Baimsy vs. Harry Stone bout had to go an extra round for a decision, and was won by Harry Stone. In the 133-pound class, Wm. Gold found no difficulty of disposing of A. Sugar, the fight being stopped in the second round. Al Frohman won from D. Rosenfeldt in the 126-pound class (knockout). Cooper (145 pounds) finished Al Cohen in the first two minutes of the first round.

The business men being challenged by the seniors to play a volley ball series for the "Y" championship proceeded to clean up against their younger opponents. The business men won the first and third games very easily, and were beaten by the seniors in the second game by one point. For the winners the line was M. Bloem (Capt.), M. Simonski, Mort Levy, J. Ross, Chas. Oelbaum, G. Lister, H. Pearlstone and A. Soltz. Basketball game next Thursday between the two groups.

The first games of the series were played off on Monday, November 26, the "Y" winning three out of three against the Orons, and the Balfours winning two out of three against the Amphibians. The Herzls had a bye this week.

The "Y" ladies team is preparing to defend the Griff Clarke trophy, and have entered into the same league. Stiff opposition is anticipated from the Stephenites who were runners-up to the "Y" girls last year, and from the Athenaeums and Belfairs who are also entered in the same league. The following girls are turning out for practise at present: Misses "Hobby" Rosenfeldt, Shirley Kogan, Anna Kaplan, G. Brenner, Shirley Moldover, Renne Stein, Lily Bochner, Ruth Dunkelmann, Sadie Zeidenberg, Gold Goodman, Pauline Keller. Eligibles should turn out for the practises which take place at the "Y" on Sunday and Thursday evening.

The following games are carded for Wednesday, December 5, at the "Y": Bantams: Rotakins vs. Y.M.H.A.; Midget: St. James vs. Y.M.H.A. After the games each Wednesday a dance is held at the "Y."

POETS' CORNER

Some time ago I think I told you about a Russian writer. To-day I have an excerpt from a poem of Apollon Maikov's. The poem is called "Art." I am sure you will understand it and love its musical rhythm.

"ART"

Idly I cut me a reed, by the shore where the sea heaves and thunders;
Dumb and forgotten it lay in my simple, my wind-beaten cabin.
Once an old traveller passed who remained for the night in our dwelling,
(Foreign his dress and his tongue, an old man who was strange to our religion);
Seeing the reed he retrieved it, lopping and piercing the nodules,
Sweetly his lips he applied to the holes that he fashioned: Responding,
Swiftly the reed-voice awoke, till the noise of the sea breathed within it.
Thus would wild Zephyros blow, were he suddenly ruffling the waters,
Fingering lightly the reed-stems and

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS PLEDGED TO SABBATH OBSERVANCE

New York (J.T.A.)—Beginning with next year the senior classes of the DeWitt Clinton, Evander Childs, New Utrecht, Morris and Bushwick High Schools and the High School of Commerce will eliminate Friday evenings from their calendar of social events, according to assurances given at a conference held between Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, President of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America and representatives of the senior classes. The delegates at the conference also promised to exert their efforts to revise their schedule for the present year so that social events will not be held on Friday evenings. This effort will be made out of deference to the Jewish Sabbath.

The first of a series of meetings arranged to discuss the subject of family purity under the auspices of the Union, was held Sunday evening, November 11th, at the Talmudical Institute of Harlem and was addressed by Rabbi M. A. Kaplan, S. Hurwitz, A. I. Schuchatovitz and Herbert S. Goldstein.

About fifty of the leading workers among Orthodox Jewish women attended the first meeting of the season arranged by the Women's Branch of the Union, at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Monday afternoon, November 12. Among the activities planned for the coming year is intensive work along social and welfare lines among the students of the Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary (the Yeshiva). A committee, headed by Mrs. Bernard Revel, will meet Monday evening, November 19, at the Central Jewish Institute, 125 East 85th Street, to work out the details of the work to be carried on at the Yeshiva.

MORGENTHAU SEES KING GEORGE

Athens (J.T.A.)—Henry Morgenthau, a member of the Executive Committee of the American Red Cross and of the Near East Relief, formerly United States Ambassador to Turkey, had a one-hour audience with King George regarding the refugee loan plan and the permanent settlement of the Christian refugees.

The Asia Minor bishops and the Metropolitan of Athens visited Mr. Morgenthau and expressed the gratitude of the refugees for American interest in their distress.

It is understood Mr. Morgenthau is endeavoring to put into operation a plan for the individual settlement of the refugees adopted by the Council of the League of Nations.

ARAB PAPER QUOTES FROM ZANGWILL'S SPEECH

Jerusalem (J.T.A.)—The newspaper "South El Shaab," appearing at Bethlehem, writes: "Zangwill, the extreme Zionist, has delivered a speech to the American Jewish Congress in New York, declaring that political Zionism is dead, and that the Jews must abandon all political hopes in Palestine. Mr. Churchill, forestalled Zangwill by saying that Great Britain's aim was not the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine. The time has come, as the extreme Zionists already admit, when the Zionist hopes between

WEARY OLD VIOLINIST DRINKS LAST COFFEE AND DIES BY GAS

Isadore Schwartz, Tired After Playing Jazz for Young Folks, Takes Final Sustaining Cup; Deadly Fumes Send Him Into Long, Long Sleep

New York (Special)—Early every morning of late years when Isadore Schwartz came wearily home to 197 Eldridge Street, on the lower East Side, from playing the violin in a cabaret up in the Bronx, he sat down to a good cup of coffee. The cup cheered him and renewed the strength in his seventy-five-year-old limbs, drained out by the long subway ride and the climb up four flights.

That nightly cup was something else, too. It was old Isadore's recipe for longevity. He drank it almost with the air of one performing a sacrament in memory of his mother, who died four years ago out in Chicago at 104. His mother, until the night she died, always swallowed a steaming cup of coffee before going to bed, and she vowed it was that which had preserved her.

"It keeps me young, mamma," old Isadore often said to his wife, Esther, smacking his pale lips on the occasions when she sat up for him, a pot of the ritualistic brew bubbling on the edge of their tiny hot-plate and sending a savory odour through the kitchen. "Yes," he would add, "it will keep me alive many years yet, never fear."

But early one morning old Isadore's elixir cruelly mocked him. It failed to restore to his fingers, numbed by a night of playing the furious jazz, their wonted sensitiveness; and when he turned out the gas under the boiling pot he turned it only part way. The flame gave way to trickling fumes that asphyxiated him as he sat cup in hand.

Neighbours, tracing the smell of gas at breakfast time, broke the door into the Schwartz's kitchen. They found old Isadore's body on the floor. In his left hand, his forefinger still looped through the handle, he held the fragment of a broken cup. His wife was found unconscious in their bedroom, but was revived at Gouverneur Hospital.

Many mourners gathered in old Isadore's rooms as the news spread in Eldridge Street. They were mostly bearded old men and shawled "Old Testament women." They remembered the old days when young Isadore played his violin nightly in the ghetto wine cellars of the period. Never a great musician, Schwartz had talent for evoking the essence from the brooding laments of his race, drawing it out in sensuous, sustained, melancholy measure.

The young folk who danced and flirted to his jazz in the uptown cafe Sunday night were not there. Perhaps they hadn't heard of old Isadore's death.

EXPULSION OF JEWS AS JEWS DENIED BY GERMANY

Deportations Unjustified, Poland Insists

Berlin (J.T.A.)—Denial that expulsion of Jews from Bavaria have anything to do with their citizenship or faith is made by the German authorities in connection with the recent protest by the Polish Government against the deportations of Polish citizens of the Jewish faith.

According to the information given the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, 1,373 Polish citizens are now registered in Munich. 169 additional arrivals were entered during September and October. The expulsions, it is said, involved only forty-five families claiming Polish citizenship, but in no case was the citizenship or faith of the deportees the determining factor.

A strict investigation of the expulsions everywhere is claimed by the authorities to have revealed that the deportees had committed "serious breaches of the economic regulations" and that the grounds on which the undesirables are expelled are recognized in international law.

The authorities also claim that the consuls of the countries concerned as well as the Munich Committee of East European Jews were given opportunities to discuss each case and that the deportation decree was withdrawn in several cases following such discussion.

Warsaw, November 22 (J.T.A.)—The German Government's claim that the expulsions of Polish citizens from Bavaria are justifiable in international law is stoutly denied by the official "Gazeta Warszawska," which insists that unless the deportations are stopped, Poland will

Dear Rabbi Brickner:

Mr. Zangwill asks me to say that he read your article in the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW with great pleasure.

There is only one point which he finds not quite correct. Instead of the Congress rejecting Mr. Zangwill's Palestine resolution, they accepted and forwarded the very resolution that was prepared by him with the exception of one clause. The contrary impression that has got about is due to what Mr. Zangwill cannot but feel the mendacity of Mr. Lipsky, and he considers it would not be right for him to let the matter pass.

Mr. Zangwill is asking me to reply to you as he is overwhelmed with work in connection with a new play, which is shortly to be produced.

Very truly yours,
Isidore Zangwill.

THE IMMIGRANT VERSUS THE FOREIGNER

"It is my conviction that the Jew will play an important role in the Canadian literature of the future." Thus spoke John Murray Gibson, Montreal journalist and railroad executive, in a recent address on "Canadian Literature and The New Canadians," which he delivered before the Toronto Empire Club.

In the course of his address Mr. Gibson emphasized the idea that the immigrant should be regarded as an asset because he enriched the culture of the country in which he settles, and stated that this is particularly true of the Jewish immigrant. Mr. Gibson stressed another point which is worthy of attention, namely, that the immigrant should not be called a foreigner, but a "New Canadian" because the immigrant who comes here tears up his stakes in the Old Land and makes this his permanent home.

We congratulate Mr. Gibson on his address. He has given expression to convictions which accord with those we have pleaded for on innumerable occasions, and which at this time, when the Canadian Government is formulating its immigration policy, are particularly apropos.

It is a common error, commonly made by people who are provincial in their outlook, to regard every new comer as a stranger, an intruder and an interloper—as one who is likely to displace them and to upset the native's ideas of government and standards of living. This motive explains the attitude of those opposed to immigration, who are constantly complaining that the immigrant is a menace and responsible for all the country's ills. It is just such an attitude as this which is keeping Canada from growing and becoming prosperous. It is our small population which is hindering us from taking our rightful place in the Council of Nations. If the Canadian Government had taken the advice of those of us who, as early as 1920, were advocating a liberal immigration policy, the present depression might not have been.

It is narrow mindedness which leads people to talk of the immigrant as a "foreigner." A foreigner is a person who holds himself aloof from becoming part and parcel of the country, and refuses to assume the responsibilities which true citizenship places upon him. A person may be a native of a country and yet remain a foreigner to its welfare and its future. A native-born son who is immoral, shiftless, corrupt, and indifferent to the best interests of his country is a foreigner—his birth notwithstanding. Whereas an immigrant is one who, having missed the first boat which brought the early pioneers, took the next boat he could get, and came over to throw in his lot with the destinies of his chosen land. His citizenship and loyalty are not matters of accident, but of choice. His appreciation of liberty and opportunity are genuine. Many immigrants have passed through and, therefore, are in a better position to appreciate and understand its true worth, than those who are born to the advantages which free countries like Canada offer, and who grows up to regard these blessings as rights and not as privileges.

On all sides we hear advocated "Only British-born immigrants preferred," because they are assimilable. To be sure British immigrants should be encouraged to come here, but to put hindrances in the way of immigrants from other lands who are able-bodied, of sound mind, willing to work and become Canadian citizens is to act unfairly and unjustly. It means casting unwarranted aspersions on the character and assimilating ability of peoples of racial origins other than British. If it has been the experience of Canada that certain groups of East and Central European peoples have settled in Western Canada and have not become assimilated in spite of their many years of settlement in this country, it is as much Canada's fault as it is the fault of these groups. When these people came they were permitted to come and colonize in groups. Very little effort was made to Canadianize them through the establishment of schools for the teaching of English, Canadian history and citizenship. They were permitted to isolate themselves and remain secluded. As a result, they are more foreign to Canada to-day than they were when they first came, because at that time they were susceptible to Canadianizing influences, whereas to-day the crust of their isolation has hardened around them and they represent a coral island in the midst of us.

It is unwise to neglect the process of incorporating the immigrant into the life of the country during the early stages of the immigrant's residence in the country. It is during this stage that he is most susceptible to true Canadianization. The native born can wield a tremendous influence in this direction by showing himself friendly, extending the glad hand of fellowship, and making the newcomer feel that he is a prospective Canadian instead of a foreigner. The native born's indifference to, his poking fun at the expense of, the immigrant, and oftentimes the former's open hostility to the latter, are frequently responsible in cases where the immigrant shows a slowness to Canadianize.

Mr. Gibson was quite correct when he said that the time had come to regard the immigrant as a New Canadian rather than as a foreigner.

His second point about the assets which the immigrants bring to the country is a matter little, if at all, understood. Besides brawn, the newcomer brings with him cultural possessions which are invaluable to a new country. It is from the mental and spiritual strands which the immigrant brings that the culture of Canada is to be woven. For Canada is a new and young country. It is a nation still in the making. In this process of making, Canada stands in need of a literature and an art which will reflect the highest and best in the soul of the different ethnic groups who live here. This literature and art should portray the endeavor which all of us are making to adjust to our new physical environment and to one another. Literature and the arts feed on diversity. If we examine the literature of England, we will find that its rivers of creativeness have been fed by rich and varied tributaries. Mingled in it are the fertilizing influences of different races, languages, and cultures, such as the Scotch, the Welsh, the Irish, the Briton, the Norman, the Jew and many others. Literature is the creative resultant of the struggle of "the soul" with "the soil." "The soul" representing the rich deposits of culture and tradition in the makeup of the immigrant, "the soil" representing the natural environment. The constant adjustment of "soul" to "soil" and the reaction one on the other gives us literature, art, music, etc. An excellent example of this process is "Marie Chapdelaine" by Hemon which is one of the best products of Canadian literature.

The literature of the United States is another instance of this relationship of "soul" to "soil." Among those who stand highest in the American literary world today are the names of Jews. To mention but a few of a host—the two Untermyers, Ludwig Lewisohn, Walter Lippman, Fanny Hurst, Edna Ferber, James Oppenheim, Max Eastman, Maxwell Bodenheim, Babette Deutsch, George Jean Nathan, Conrad Bercovici, Alter Brody. L. Frank Tucker, writing in the last September issue of the Century Magazine, under the title "Forty Years at an Editor's Desk," says, "In the last ten years there have come from that new pioneer region, the East side of New York, more genuine literary sincerity and dramatic integrity than the first hundred years of American Magazine writers gave to the world."

In a sense, America's literature, art, music, the stage, are unthinkable without the Jew. Other immigrant groups are contributing, to a more limited degree, to America's culture. America's culture is a veritable symphony in which almost every immigrant group is Canada, too, has the same opportunities of fashioning a culture unique to herself through the co-operation and contribution of her new Canadians. Canada can become her own worst enemy by setting up a false standard of assimilation which will insist on uniformity and cultural conformity. Standardization may be profitable in industry and commerce, but it is the very worst enemy of culture.

By cultivating the immigrant, and regarding him as a New Canadian, by encouraging the new comer to develop his native cultural and religious values, this country will produce a Canadian culture which will be the synthesis of the best in her diverse population.

Every Friday

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

The Zionist Institute seen after an absence of more than a year is astounding. The old, shabby Zionist Institute is clean; and as neat as any home upon the Hill. There are polished hardwood floors, chintz covered settees and chairs, frilled and tucked curtains. Everything fresh—a delight. In the reading room is a good supply of Yiddish newspapers kept up to date, all neatly arranged and comfortable. Homely, little furbelows, little tables, caresses, a diligent, scrupulous orderliness manifest a loving, maternal spirit watching. The marvel is how the old, intimate, insidious Jewishness of the place has been kept from being renovated away. Mr. Shatz is still there, still playing chess, humming a "liebele"; around him is the same group of incorrigibles, those evergreen Zionists who have never remained at home one evening. The old pre-Balfour Declaration, golutz "Zionismus" still flourishes undaunted. A note is missing, however, a touch, a nuance, an idiosyncrasy, possibly. The samovar has been mounted and degraded to a decoration. Possibly, however, secretly, they intend to recall it to service, on some below-zero morning, when the furnace will be out, and fingers may yet be warmed around a tumblerful of its scalding brew. Who wrought this miracle? Everyone. The chairman of the Council hinted that he had; others told me that the women had brought Heaven to earth, had worked day and night, and had extorted the money. To all responsible we should be more than grateful; we should be proud of them. These signs of awakening of the social conscience, of recognition of communal responsibility are gladdening, belated though they be.

"II"

From Montreal: Discussion on the school question has revealed such an apparent spiritual survival as to lead to the return to the fold of a certain Montrealer who in quieter days was never seen within a synagogue. Perhaps his present deep concern over the fact that the children are not being given Jewish religious training in the public schools resulted as did the anxiety of some others from the touching phonographic rendition of Kol Nidre at a bacon-and-eggs party in honour of separate schools on the night of Yom Kippur.

We liked the ease and grace with which the very capable society editor of the Jewish Tribune introduced greater New York into her column by merely remarking that "Mr. and Mrs. Cohn, of New York, have returned from abroad."

"Saturday Night" which growled so when the "New York Call" was purchased by the labor organizations of the needle trades and became the "Leader" with a Jewish directing board, would probably hail the suspension of the "Leader" as the failure of the cause of labor journalism. The truth is that the "Leader" ceased publication temporarily because of high printing costs and a sensible determination not to continue until the unions interested were able to assist the paper to a position of self-support. The "Leader" aims to resume publication within a few months when its committee has worked out plans that will abolish financial hazard. That the "Leader" was able to make a wide appeal is shown by the fact that it doubled its circulation since October 1 and those who are interested in its ultimate success will find encouragement in this remarkable achievement.

Meantime the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, a heavy contributor to the "Leader," plans to place the operatives in the industry it controls on a five-day 40-hour working week and if this intention is carried out one hundred and fifty thousand workers will have the Jewish Shabbas and the Christian Sabbath as two rest days in which to live as well as exist.

The next meeting of the class will be held on Monday afternoon, December 3. The subject for this year is "Judaism as Creed and Life."

University Bible Class

The University Jewish Girls' Bible Class, which meets weekly under the direction of Rabbi Brickner, will meet again November 28, at 5 o'clock, in room No. 6 of the University Library Building, and thereafter on Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Course of Lectures

The second lecture on "Aspects of Child Life," being given by the Temple Sisterhood, will take place Tuesday afternoon, December 11, at 3 o'clock, with Dr. Alan Brown, the noted child specialist, speaking on the physical development of the child. On Tuesday afternoon, January 15, Dr. Peter Sandiford, professor of Education at the University of Toronto, will lecture on the mental development of the child. This course of three unit lectures will be open to members of the Sisterhood and their friends who are not members.

Religious School

The Chanukah entertainment of the religious schools of the Holy Blossom Congregation, which include the Bond Street Synagogue and the Sabbath School that meets at the Y.M. and Y.W.H.A. building, will be held on Sunday afternoon, December 9, at 3 o'clock. The programme will consist of a short service in the synagogue proper, when candles will be lighted and Rabbi Brickner will address the children. The entertainment in the synagogue chambers will follow.

Junior Society

The Chanukah meeting of the Junior Society will take place in the synagogue chambers on Saturday evening, December 8, at 8.15. A Chanukah programme, consisting of a play, "The Unlighted Menorah," will be presented by the members, as well as several other interesting numbers.

Chanukah

Chanukah begins on Sunday evening, December 2, and lasts for eight days. The first candle is kindled on this evening and one additional candle is lighted each succeeding night until eight candles are lit on Sunday evening, December 9. The lighting of the Chanukah candles is one of the most impressive and significant services in the Jewish ritual. Parents are urged to observe this custom. Chanukah Service may be found in the Union Prayer Book on pages 351-354, and in the Singer Prayer Book.

Temple Sisterhood

A Chanukah evening will be given by the Sisterhood to the members of the Congregation, their families and friends, Tuesday, December 4, at the synagogue chambers, 115 Bond Street, at 8.15 p.m. The candles will be lighted and an interesting musical programme will be presented. Mr. Max Moller, pianist, will play several selections; Miss Lillian Wechsler and Mrs. J. Epstein will sing. Informal dancing will follow the programme, for which a good orchestra has been engaged. The Hope Chest will be raffled that evening. The date is Tuesday evening, December 4, and not the third.

At the last meeting of the Junior Society, on Sunday, November 25, a series of impromptu debates was given. The debaters were Misses Rose Elias, Florence Hutter and Helen Lavine; and Messrs. Monty Becker, Sam Keyfetz, Harry Kosky, James Montagness, and Harry Singer. The debates were run off in three series, elimination round, finals and semi-finals. In the final round Mr. Monty Becker upheld the affirmative side of "Resolved, that wit is superior to beauty," and Miss Rose Elias argued for the negative. Miss Elias won.

KAUTSKY URGES JEWS TO HELP DESTROY BOLSHIEVISM

London (J.T.A.)—Karl Kautsky, veteran Socialist leader, advises the Jews of Russia to join hands with the democratic forces in that country to overthrow Bolshevism. This advice is contained in an article by Kautsky in the Labour Magazine wherein the writer explains that the Czarist oppression of the Jews drove them into all the revolutionary parties. This, he says, explains also their connection with Bolshevism. The Bolshevik dictatorship, he goes on to say, has made individual Jews powerful but the Jewish people as a whole has suffered like the non-Jewish population.

Kautsky believes that the fall of Bolshevism will result in a terrible flood of hatred against Bolshevism being loosed upon the Jews, if the masses will identify Bolshevism with the Jews.

He concludes that, however, the white terror is not the only way of destroying Bolshevism but rather by the growth of a democratic feeling.
